Just Playing is Just Great! Developmentally Appropriate Principles for Early Learners

Play is appropriate and essential to early childhood development. Children are never “just playing.” In fact, through play they are always developing and learning. In his engaging, energetic style, Ronald will discuss developmental theory, making it real, understandable and applicable to interactions with your students. He will address implications for activities and appropriate learning materials, as well as how to set the learning environment. Listen, learn and be inspired to “Just Play” with your students.

Ronald Mah has been involved in education, human services or therapy work since earning his Bachelor of Arts degree in Psychology and Social Science from UC Berkeley in 1975. He holds two California teaching credentials and a Master of Arts degree in Psychology. He is currently a Licensed Marriage Family Therapist in private practice in San Leandro, CA. He is the author of multiple articles and books, has created a DVD series on childhood issues and development and is a favorite presenter with a style all his own.

Dr. Jean

Better Bodies and Brains!

You learn on your feet, not on your seat! When children move, dance and wiggle, more senses are activated and the message is more likely to get to the brain. Music and movement also emit endorphins which make you happy. In this keynote you’ll discover activities that will help children be their best physically, socially and cognitively. Highlights:

- Songs to start your day and get your blood going
- Routines for balancing, stretching and relaxing
- Dances to reinforce phonics and math skills
- Ideas to make you jump, hop, pretend and smile!
